

Georgia Space Leadership Summit

Aerospace leaders from across the state gathered at the Georgia Tech Research Institute on July 29 to develop a plan to expand the space industry within Georgia. The Georgia Space Leadership Summit, sponsored by the Center of Innovation for Aerospace and the Georgia Tech Center for Space Technology and Research (C-STAR), included representatives from academia, industry, state government and the investor community. The group will take a look at the existing university research assets in Georgia to better position them for this industry, work with existing companies and those looking at Georgia on what needs they believe should be addressed, and working with the numerous partners to develop a communication and outreach strategy among others.

Ag UAVs to take Flight at Sunbelt Expo

The Georgia UAS Working Group, working with the support of the Centers of Innovation for Aerospace and Agribusiness, and the Atlanta Chapter of AUVSI, is putting together an exhibit for the Sunbelt Ag Expo, in Moultrie, Georgia on Oct 14-16, 2014. The Georgia-focused exhibit will feature several UAS related companies, with the Centers and AUVSI sharing a large exhibit area.

The Sunbelt Ag Expo is one of the nation's largest agriculture exhibitions, and up to 100,000 people attend over the 3 days of the show. Georgia's UAS team will be there to highlight university research in UAS and the work of several small Georgia based UAS developers and operators. The Georgia team is also seeking Certificates of Authorization from the FAA to conduct research flights over a portion of the Expo during the show, as a way of continuing the dialog between the agriculture and UAS communities, so that the road map ahead for additional precision agriculture related research and development remains relevant and valuable to the eventual end users.
